

Other People, Other Places

Here is a book from one of the foremost Bahai authors and translators, laden with the delightful, witty, profound, heart-searching distillation of a lifetimes dedication to one overmastering theme: the Revelation of Bahauallah. What is it, she asks, that people have found in the Cause of the Bab and Bahauallah, from its birth until this hour? Why have they offered themselves either to live or die for it? They are timely questions indeed, as the attention of the world is drawn to the tragic plight of the Bahais of Iran. Her own destiny has been a less violent one. She has travelled for the sake of her Faith in many countries, and has worked for it unflaggingly. But her observant humour has never been weighed down, and her book sparkles with amusing incidents described with the lightest of touches. The authors historical studies and her personal acquaintance with great Bahais are the source of many of the essays, while her own story and that of her family enhance the flavour of this attractive collection. A Treasure-trove awaits the reader of this book. It ranges from witty observation during two extended periods of residence in Europe and travel in a dozen countries, to reminiscences of great Bahais, portraits of persons drawn from earlier centuries and our own, and memorable essays on the nature of love.
